Pari, a 10-year-old black Labrador Retriever named Lily, has to save the family farm from foreclosure after her owners pass away. At first Pari is sad and frightened by this new development but soon the animals on the farm help her get through this difficult time. The animals give their love and support which helps Pari find the courage to face all of life's difficulties. The film is an inspiring story about self-belief, empathy, kindness and loyalty that children will easily relate to. This film was produced by The Great Wall Organization (TGWO) and it is narrated by well known actor Suhasini. Suhasini is herself a dog lover and she herself got married to an Indian fellow after she met him in his village, hence she knows all the issues faced by the animals. She had this idea to make this film after realising that there were no films about animals yet. This idea won her the "Best Coordinator for Youth Films Award" at the 57th National Film Awards. The film was released on 21 October 2014 has earned universal acclaim from critics and audiences alike.

The film received mixed reviews. Swaminathan of The Hindu said, "The film is strong on its narration but falls short in terms of its treatment. But the story is fresh and there are bright moments in this film." Behindwoods.com gave 3 stars out of 5, saying "Pari is much like the child who knows only how to love, nothing else". The film won three awards at the 57th National Film Awards, including Best Children's Film for Suhasini.

A teaser trailer was released on 29 May 2014 after Suhasini announced that she was working on a new movie which would be based on animals. She also announced that she would be making exactly the kind of film that she wanted to make, one to inspire the children. The first official trailer was released on 28 June 2014. It has received praises for its narration and Suhasini's performance. The movie is produced by TGWO (The Great Wall Organization) and narrated by her.
